

MANN MCGOWAN

INSTALLATIONS LTD

Architects: Southwark Building Design
Contractor: Apollo Group

The original library was opened on 24th November 1897 by the then Lord Chancellor. The construction cost was £5,800. An extension was added and opened in 1954.

One hundred and seven years after it opened its doors, we manufactured and installed our Pyrovista® 30 glazed screens as part of a building up-grade and refurbishment

These 30 minute fire screens were positioned on new lift landings manufactured from White Oak and glazed with clear fire resisting glass and Pyroglaze® seals.

The screens provide fire separation, impact safety and allow natural light from the roof glazing to pass down onto the ground floor reading area.

The screens were supplied and fitted at a lower cost than the original total building costs.
